Special Investigations Involving U.S. Presidents Since 1973

Overview

The A-Mark Foundation commissioned this report on special investigations involving presidents and those close to them following the appointment of Special Counsel Robert S. Mueller to investigate possible collusion among President Donald J. Trump, his presidential campaign and Russia in the 2016 U.S. presidential election. That investigation concluded on March 22, 2019.

This report, with the exception of some commentary for historical context on the appointment of the first special prosecutor investigation,¹ initiated by President Ulysses S. Grant in 1875, effectively begins with the Watergate investigation of President Richard M. Nixon in 1973. The report concludes with the end of the investigation into Trump's 2016 presidential campaign.

Our criteria for the special investigations of the eight presidents [Barack H. Obama and his administration were not investigated] versus the investigations in the Appendix are as follows:

The eight special investigations beginning in 1973 are investigations by special prosecutors/independent counsels/special counsels that began with possible offence(s) tied directly or indirectly to the president in office, and the investigation of President Gerald R. Ford which began with the investigation of President Nixon; the 22 special investigations in the Appendix are either prior to 1973, or when the investigations seemingly involved personal behavior or actions not tied directly or indirectly to administration business or action.

Excluded in this work entirely are investigations of presidents and their administrations when they did not involve a Special Prosecutor, Independent Counsel or Special Counsel, such as the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson on Feb. 24, 1868, that occurred in the House of Representatives.²

I. Summary: U.S. Presidential Special Prosecutor / Independent Counsel / Special Counsel Investigations 1973 to 2019

The first president involved in a special investigation was President Ulysses S. Grant in 1875 who appointed John B. Henderson, then fired him, then appointed James Brodhead in the Whiskey Ring Scandal. “Though Grant was not suspected, his private secretary, Orville E. Babcock, was indicted in the conspiracy but was acquitted after Grant testified to his innocence.”³ The cost of investigation⁴ was $1,442,672.72 in 2017 dollars.⁵

The following is a chart of special investigations starting with Watergate in 1973.

III. A Summary of the Differences Among the Titles Special Prosecutor / Independent Counsel / Special Counsel

The titles for those tasked with conducting special investigations involving presidents and their administrations are sometimes used interchangeably in the media and other resources, but there is a difference among the official titles “Special Prosecutor,” “Independent Counsel” and “Special Counsel.”

This is a brief summary of the history behind the titles for those leading investigations and how each is appointed, and does not delve into the details of the many steps that take place before a special investigation is initiated, such as an internal Department of Justice or FBI investigation or a conclusion by a congressional committee that recommends a more thorough investigation.

Prior to reform in 1978, presidents themselves were among the officials able to appoint and fire special investigators, such as President Ulysses S. Grant who appointed two and fired one during the “Whiskey Ring” scandal.³⁶ Those investigators held the title of “Special Prosecutor.” In Watergate, Attorney General-designate Elliot L. Richardson³⁷ appointed the special prosecutor and when President Richard M. Nixon initiated the firing of the special prosecutor through the attorney general’s office, Richardson resigned.³⁸

After Watergate, the method for choosing a special prosecutor was changed so that the president could not fire the person working on the investigation. The Ethics in Government Act of 1978, initially meant to last for five years, was enacted. Under the rules of this statute, a three-judge panel assigned to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia³⁹ was now responsible for appointing a special prosecutor who would be independent from reprisal by the White House. Although the attorney general could not choose the investigator, they could still apply for the appointment of a special prosecutor under the statute.⁴⁰

The title of special prosecutor was retained until the subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management “proposed that the name ‘special prosecutor’ be changed to ‘independent counsel’ to remove the pejorative connotation of the investigation.”⁴¹ In the Ethics in Government Act Amendments of 1982, “Special Prosecutor” was officially changed to “Independent Counsel.”⁴²

Even though an independent counsel could now be appointed independent from the executive branch, attorneys general on at least two occasions directly appointed investigators who served as “Special Counsel,” which was still a viable choice under the statute and did not require approval by the three-judge panel.

An independent counsel could only be terminated by the attorney general, other than “impeachment and conviction,” for “good cause, physical or mental disability ... or any other condition that substantially impairs the performance of such independent counsel’s duties.”⁴³

The 1978 statute was amended, allowed to expire, and reauthorized over two decades until it finally expired in 1999. As of the date of this report, the current title for the investigator appointed for special investigations involving the White House directly or indirectly, like Robert Mueller’s investigation into the Trump campaign/Russia collusion, is “Special Counsel.”

4. Conclusion

- a. Sept. 8, 1974 - President Gerald Ford issued Nixon a full pardon.⁸⁶
- b. Oct. 26, 1978 - The Watergate investigation prompted a reform in appointments of special prosecutors in independent counsel investigations with the passage of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978.⁸⁷

"This ultimately became known as United States Office of the Independent Counsel, and was used for major investigations like Iran-Contra during the Reagan years and Whitewater during the Clinton years, which ultimately led to Clinton's impeachment."⁸⁸

"Since then, 21 special investigations have been launched, with seven leading to convictions and five still active [1999]. The total cost passed $166 million through the last fiscal year."⁸⁹

- c. The reform act expired in 1999:

"Congress in 1978 passed a law in the wake of Watergate that allowed the appointment of 'independent counsel' by a three-judge panel of a Washington, D.C. appeals court at the request of the attorney general, but the law had five-year sunset provisions and was ultimately allowed to expire in 1999, according to the Congressional Research Service."⁹⁰

5. Cost of Investigation

- a. The Watergate investigation cost $6.5 million or more, according to the Washington Post article titled “Watergate Cost Tops $6 Million,” May 21, 1974.⁹¹

“The White House office does not maintain accounting or other records which would permit us to obtain precise information on the costs incurred on Watergate,’ GAO said. To make its estimate, GAO said, it examined White House payroll records and interviewed staff members to determine the percentage of their time devoted to Watergate.”

- b. The “best estimates of the Watergate cost,”⁹² according to a June 7, 1974, White House memo from the Office of Communication, with data broken down into the following categories (approximately $400,000 is noted for White House Legal Staff):

	Staff Members	Lawyers	Funds
Senate Watergate Committee	42 (the Earvin committee had a staff of 92 at its peak)	17	$2 million
House Judiciary Committee	100	43	$1.17 million
Special Prosecutor’s Office	80	38	$2.8 million
Grand Juries	N/A	N/A	$225,000
GSA Audit of Nixon Homes	N/A	N/A	$100,000
GAO Audit of Nixon Homes	N/A	N/A	$100,000
White House Legal Staff (listed separately)	21	13	$400,000

1. Summary of the Investigation

- a. Although Watergate started under the Nixon administration and was initiated against President Nixon, the investigation extended into the Ford administration. On Oct. 17, 1975, Charles F.C. Ruff was sworn in as part-time director, and he was the last of four special prosecutors on the Watergate investigation.¹⁰³ During his time as special prosecutor, Ruff conducted an investigation into alleged misuse of political contributions by Ford, and on Oct. 14, 1976, Ruff concluded that there was no evidence of wrongdoing.¹⁰⁴

2. Cost of Investigation

- a. During the Ford administration, the following amount was found to be appropriated for the Watergate investigation:¹⁰⁵

Watergate Appropriations During Ford Administration
July 1, 1974 to June 1975 appropriations ¹⁰⁶	$2,804,000
July 1, 1975 - June 30, 1976 appropriations ¹⁰⁷	$2,044,000

4. Conclusion

- a. From the “White House Statement on the Findings of a Special Investigation” dated Oct. 16, 1979:

“...We said from the very beginning of the investigation that no moneys were diverted ... an[d] the report shows our statements were absolutely correct. We also said from the beginning that we would cooperate fully with the investigation, and the report shows we did exactly that.”¹²⁴

- b. Curran, in his Oct. 16, 1979, report, noted that the president could have faced penalty for false statements made during his deposition:

“On September 5, 1979 in the White House, I and my staff conducted a four hour deposition under oath of President Jimmy Carter.* [Footnote: Jimmy Carter was subject to prosecution under Title 18, United States Code, Section 1001 and 1623 for any false statements made during the course of his deposition.]”¹²⁵

a. According to the National Archives, “Records of Lawrence Walsh”:

"In October and November 1986, two secret U.S. Government operations were publicly exposed, potentially implicating Reagan administration officials in illegal activities: the provision of assistance to the military activities of Nicaraguan contra rebels during an October 1984 to October 1986 prohibition on such aid, and the sale of U.S. arms to Iran in contravention of stated U.S. policy and in possible violation of arms-export controls. In late November 1986, Reagan administration officials announced that some of the proceeds from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran had been diverted to the contras."¹³²

3. Dates of Investigation

a. START – Dec. 19, 1986¹³³

"The 'Front Door' investigation, started by Federal Bureau of Investigation in November [26] of 1986, was transferred when Lawrence Walsh was appointed Independent Counsel on December 19, 1986."¹³⁴

b. END – On Aug. 4, 1993,¹³⁵ Lawrence Walsh submitted his final report to the House of Representatives.¹³⁶ In the final report¹³⁷ Walsh wrote: “The criminal investigation of [then Vice President George H.W.] Bush was regrettably incomplete.” President H.W. Bush had pardoned many defendants in the Iran-Contra investigation. In Chapter 27 of the final report, Walsh said of Reagan:

“It was concluded that President Reagan's conduct fell well short of criminality which could be successfully prosecuted. Fundamentally, it could not be proved beyond a reasonable doubt that President Reagan knew of the underlying facts of Iran/contra that were criminal or that he made criminal misrepresentations regarding them.”

4. Conclusion

- a. In 1987, a requirement was made for tracking expenditures:

“In 1987, Public Law 100-202 established a permanent, indefinite appropriation within Justice to fund expenditures by independent counsels. Independent counsels are required to report their expenditures from the appropriation for each 6-month period in which they have operations.”¹³⁸

- b. March 16, 1988 – Indictments:

"On March 16, 1988, the grand jury handed down a 23 count indictment against [John] Poindexter, [Oliver] North, [Albert] Hakim, and Richard Secord."¹³⁹

- c. Dec. 24, 1992 – Bush pardons:

"On December 24, 1992, President George H.W. Bush granted pardons to six defendants in the Iran-Contra Affairs. The defendants were Elliott Abrams, a former assistant secretary of state for Central America; former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane; former CIA officials Duane Clarridge, Alan Fiers, and Clair George; and former Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger."¹⁴⁰

1. Summary of the Investigation

- a. “Whitewater” is the blanket title for a series of investigations that started with “any possible violations of law relating in any way to President Clinton and the First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's relationship with Madison Guarantee Savings and Loan Association, the Whitewater Development Corporation, or Capital Management Services.”¹⁶⁹ Attorney General Janet Reno¹⁷⁰ appointed Robert B. Fiske, Jr. to lead the investigation, which also included the death of Vince Foster.

Fiske found no link between Whitewater and Foster's death.¹⁷¹ When Clinton signed the Independent Counsel Reauthorization Act of 1994, a panel of judges independently chose Kenneth Starr to continue the Whitewater investigation that ultimately included "Travelgate" on March, 22, 1996¹⁷²; Filegate, on June 21, 1996¹⁷³; and the Monica Lewinsky affair on Jan. 16, 1998.¹⁷⁴ President Bill Clinton was impeached on Dec. 19, 1998, in relation to the Lewinsky affair.¹⁷⁵

2. Special Prosecutor/Independent Counsel/Special Counsel

- a. Robert B. Fiske, Jr. – Attorney General-appointed Special Counsel
- b. Kenneth Starr – First Independent Counsel under the Independent Counsel Reauthorization Act of 1994
- c. Robert Ray – Independent Counsel after Starr stepped down
- d. Julie F. Thomas – Independent Counsel who succeeded Ray to close out Whitewater investigation¹⁷⁶

3. Dates of Investigation

- a. START (Fiske investigation) – On Jan. 20, 1994, Fiske was appointed Whitewater special counsel at Clinton's request on Jan. 12, 1994.¹⁷⁷ At a press briefing with Attorney General Janet Reno, where she announced Fiske's appointment, Fiske defined his charter as broad, and potentially covering other matters, including the death of Vince Foster, which Fiske ruled a suicide on July 1, 1994.¹⁷⁸

- b. END (Fiske investigation) – On Oct. 6, 1994, Fiske stepped away from the investigation. He had been replaced by Kenneth W. Starr on Aug. 5, 1994, after Clinton signed the Independent Counsel Reauthorization Act of 1994 and Reno was denied her request to have Fiske re-appointed “by a three-judge U.S. Court of Appeals.”¹⁸⁰ According to the court’s order, Fiske was replaced because he was appointed by the “incumbent Administration” and needed to be replaced for the “appearance of independence.”¹⁸¹ During his tenure, Fiske conducted the first ever deposition of “a sitting president and first lady.”¹⁸²
- c. START (Starr investigation) – On Aug. 5, 1994, Starr was appointed to continue the Whitewater investigation “by a three-judge U.S. Court of Appeals.”¹⁸³
- d. END (Starr investigation) / START (Ray investigation) – On Oct. 18, 1999, “Kenneth Starr steps down as independent counsel. Robert Ray, an experienced federal prosecutor, is sworn in as his successor.”¹⁸⁴
- e. END (Ray investigation) / START (Thomas investigation) – On March 12, 2002, Ray resigned, and Julie F. Thomas became the last independent counsel on the Whitewater investigation.¹⁸⁵ On March 20, 2002,¹⁸⁶ Ray released his final report on Whitewater that exonerated the Clintons.¹⁸⁷
- f. END (Thomas investigation) – On March 23, 2004, the office was terminated.¹⁸⁸

4. Conclusion

a. Oct. 8, 1998

"The House votes 258-176 to open an impeachment inquiry into the President, only the third such proceeding in U.S. history. Thirty-one Democrats join Republicans in voting for the inquiry."¹⁸⁹

b. June 30, 1999 – The Independent Counsel law expires during the Whitewater/Lewinsky investigations.¹⁹⁰

"Now responsibility for investigating official misconduct reverts back to the Justice Department where it was during Watergate and before. The attorney general will have the power to both hire and fire special counsels."¹⁹¹

"With the congressional impeachment proceedings against Clinton resulting from the Lewinsky investigation, it was the Democrats' turn to rail against the independent counsel law, pointing to the fact that special investigations have no limits on cost, length and scope, and saying Starr was far overzealous in pursuing the Clintons."¹⁹²

c. Jan. 19, 2001 – President Clinton admits making false statements and surrenders law license for five years.¹⁹³

d. Jan. 20, 2001

"Hours before ending his term in office, President Clinton issues 140 pardons. Included on the list is the Clintons' former Whitewater Development Co. partner, Susan McDougal."¹⁹⁴

5. Cost of Investigation

a. According to a WashingtonPost.com article, the Whitewater investigation total was $70 million dollars.¹⁹⁵

b. The Independent Counsel FY 2008 Performance Budget sets the cost at $55,105,992¹⁹⁶ for the Starr, Ray, Thomas investigations:

“Violation of any federal criminal law relating to what has become known as the ‘Whitewater Affair’, President Clinton’s relationship with a former White House intern, the White House travel office, misuse of FBI files, and other matters -- several defendants involved.”¹⁹⁷

c. Other estimates:

“According to reports by GAO, the cost of Independent Counsels Thomas’, Ray’s and Starr’s portion of the investigation, through September 30, 2005, has been $73,597,345. In addition, GAO has reported that Robert B. Fiske, Jr., spent $6,073,000, on the earlier ‘Whitewater’ investigation prior to Mr. Starr’s appointment.”¹⁹⁸

d. For this report, the $55,105,992 for the Starr, Ray, and Thomas investigations was added to the $6,073,000 investigation, for a total cost of $61,178,992 for the Whitewater investigations.

1. Summary of the Investigation

- a. After CIA agent Valerie Plame was identified by name in a syndicated column,²⁰⁴ on Sept. 30, 2003, the Justice Department launched an investigation. On Dec. 30, 2003, Patrick J. Fitzgerald was appointed as special counsel to investigate the leak.²⁰⁵ High-level George W. Bush admin officials were investigated, and “the investigation also touched on presidential adviser Karl Rove,”²⁰⁶ eventually resulting in the prosecution of Vice President Richard B. Cheney’s Chief of Staff I. Lewis “Lacey” Libby,²⁰⁷ and the subsequent commutation of his perjury and obstruction of justice convictions from President Bush (Libby received a full pardon from President Donald Trump on April 13, 2018).²⁰⁸

3. Dates of Investigation

- a. START – On Dec. 30, 2003, Deputy Attorney General James Comey announced the appointment of Patrick J. Fitzgerald as special counsel in charge of the “investigation into alleged leak of CIA agent identity.” Attorney General John Ashcroft had recused himself “based on the totality of the circumstances and the facts and evidence developed at this stage of the investigation,” according to Comey during a Dec. 30, 2003, Department of Justice press conference.²⁰⁹ On June 24, 2004, Fitzgerald questioned Bush for more than an hour, but Bush was not put under oath.²¹⁰
- b. END – On Dec. 11, 2007, “the administration official [Libby] dropped his appeal of his convictions.”²¹¹

“The activities of the special counsel were, for all practical purposes concluded as of March 2008, but the office of the special counsel will continue for limited purposes, such as responding to congressional requests for information.”²¹²

4. Conclusion

- a. On why he wouldn't issue a final report, in 2005 Fitzgerald said:

“I think what people may be confused about is that reports used to be issued by independent counsels. And one of the complaints about the independent counsel statute was that an ordinary citizen, when investigated, they're charged with a crime or they're not; they're not charged with a crime, people don't talk about it. of the interest in making sure that -- well, there's an interest in independent counsels to making sure those investigations were done thoroughly but then people ended up issuing reports for people not charged. And one of the criticisms leveled was that you should not issue reports about people who are not charged with a crime. That statute lapsed. I'm not an independent counsel, and I do not have the authority to write a report, and, frankly, I don't think I should have that authority. I think we should conduct this like any other criminal investigation: charge someone or be quiet."²¹³

Oct. 28, 2005 - Libby is indicted.²¹⁴ On June 5, 2007, Libby is sentenced to 30 months in prison for perjury and obstruction of justice, and resigns as Cheney's chief of staff.²¹⁵ Bush commuted his sentence on July 2, 2007.²¹⁶ Libby received a full pardon from President Donald Trump on April 13, 2018.²¹⁷

5. Conclusion: Excerpts from Attorney General William P. Barr’s “main findings of the special counsel’s two-year investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election.”²²⁸

“The Special Counsel's investigation did not find that the Trump campaign or anyone associated with it conspired or coordinated with Russia in its efforts to influence the 2016 U.S. presidential election. As the report states: ‘[T]he investigation did not establish that members of the Trump Campaign conspired or coordinated with the Russian government in its election interference activities.’ ... The Special Counsel therefore did not draw a conclusion - one way or the other – as to whether the examined conduct constituted obstruction. Instead, for each of the relevant actions investigated, the report sets out evidence on both sides of the question and leaves unresolved what the Special Counsel views as ‘difficult issues’ of law and fact concerning whether the President's actions and intent could be viewed as obstruction. The Special Counsel states that ‘while this report does not conclude that the President committed a crime, it also does not exonerate him.’”

V. Conclusion

The Mueller investigation took 675 days, which does not put it in the top three for the most days for a special presidential investigation: 3,716 for Whitewater; 2,420 for Iran-Contra; and 1,464 for Watergate. Although reporting of costs for each investigation varies and they are not apple to apple equivalents, the Mueller investigation into the Trump campaign was the fourth overall costliest; by per-day costs, it was first.

The metrics from the charts and information in this work suggest that the time and costs of the various presidential investigations don't follow any discernible or clear patterns. Given the complexities of some of the investigations, questions not covered in this report may emerge from it, such as:

- Was the $83 million for the Clinton investigation too much or was the $650,000 spent on the H.W. Bush investigation too little?
- Were the 3,716 days spent on the Clinton investigations more important to our country than the 1,443 days spent on the W. Bush investigation?
- Were all or some of the investigations politically motivated at the start?
- Were any of the investigations extended or underfunded or cut short for political reasons?
- Should the counsel on the investigations be investigated? If so, by whom?

We hope this report will add a bit of sunlight to the somewhat arcane world of special prosecutor / independent counsel / special counsel investigations.

Your thoughts, comments or criticisms of this report would be appreciated.
